Oval in the second Tiburtine room in which the legendary king Anius is depicted. During a desperate attempt to catch his daughter Cloris kidnapped by Mercury, King Anius drowned in the river Parensius which thereafter was called Aniene after him.